

Tom Bradley – Voting Board Member

A self-described “jack of all trades,” Tom Bradley hails from Provo, Utah. Tom’s professional career began as a paramedic, where he spent more than a decade working in Salt Lake City before he embraced his entrepreneurial spirit. In 2000, Tom opened a medical supply company that quickly grew into a diversified, statewide enterprise. Not long after establishing the medical supply venture, Tom partnered with friends to open one of the first CrossFit gyms in the state of Utah. The vision for the gym was to provide a safe place for people to build friendships and community while offering classes for a broad range of fitness levels and abilities. As Tom developed and nurtured these businesses, he served as a board of director for several organizations, including the Pregnancy Resource Center, Centerpoint Church, the Utah Medical Equipment Association, and various local ventures. Several years later, he decided to sell the businesses and return to the emergency services as a police officer to serve the people of Orem, Utah. Tom loves hosting BBQs at his home with friends and family and is always looking for willing participants to join him on his camping and backpacking adventures.
